

The National Floor Safety Institute is a nonprofit organization that through education and research helps prevent slip-and-fall accidents. Those products carrying the NFSI certification have been subjected to a rigorous series of tests that include real world applications.

In Phase 1 of the testing process, Mountville mats were submitted to the NFSI laboratory for testing with the Universal Walkway Tester (UWT). The mats were then wet-tested for Static Coefficient of Friction (SCOF) under NFSI 101A guidelines. After meeting the standards set by the NFSI in Phase 1, the mats were then eligible for testing in Phase 2.

In Phase 2 of the testing process, the mats were installed in real world applications for a minimum of thirty days. They were exposed to the same demands of everyday use, including commercial traffic loads, exposure to cleaning agents and spills. After the test period expired, the mats were cleaned and wet-tested for SCOF. Once the mats met the NFSI's minimum acceptable level of slip resistance, they were classified as "High-Traction" and were NFSI certified.

In the marketplace, architects, designers and specifiers are being educated in the selection of products that carry the NFSI certification for high-risk areas. This certification is their assurance that the product they are selecting has been clinically tested to meet the highest of performance standards.

Submitting our mats to such rigorous testing is just another indication that Mountville Mills is leading the industry with the highest performing, most innovative, and now the safest mats available.
